How To Pay By Mail Another simple Dish Network bill pay option is to pay by mail. your payment to Dish in the provided envelope. You can also download your bill online to see where Dish tells you to mail your bill to. Otherwise, you can use the MyDish website and select your state from the dropdown menu under "Mail." This will give you the correct address that you can mail a check in order to pay your bill. Keep in mind that paying by mail is the slowest option to pay your Dish bill. It may take up to 10 business days for your payment to process, so make sure to mail it out early enough. How To Pay By Cash Dish also allows you to pay with cash by paying at MoneyGram, Western Union, or CheckFreePay. If you are not sure where your nearest participating locations are, use Dish Network's Pay-In-Cash locator. These locations will charge you a fee to pay with cash but it's up to you to decide if that's the best way to pay your bill. How To Pay By Receiver If you have either a Wally or Hopper receiver, you can also pay via the receiver. To do this, simply navigate to the My Account option on the main menu of your receiver. Once logged in, you can add or select your payment option and then schedule a payment but don't like using the app or navigating the website, this option may be attractive to you. Understanding Dish Bill late fees If you do not pay your Dish Bill on time, you'll be charged a $10 late fee. If you pay by check and the check bounces, there will be a $20 fee. If you go long enough without paying, there may be a service interruption. To keep this from happening, you can request a payment extension under the Bill section of your online account summary. The extension will give you an additional 9 days to pay your bill and the extension costs $15. Access to live reps User-friendly support page 24/7 live tech support Many ways to contact Unreliable chat wait times Difficult customer service hours for Alaska and Hawaii DISH customer service hours are 8:00 a.m. to midnight (EST), seven days a week. For your convenience, here's how that breaks down across time zones. (Hours below are for both chat and phone support.) Time zoneDISH phone support hours (Mon.-Fri.)Eastern Standard Time (MST)6:00 a.m.-10:00 p.m.Pacific Standard Time (PST)5:00 a.m.-9:00 p.m.Alaska Standard Time (AKST)4:00 a.m.-8:00 p.m. Hawaii-Aleutian Standard Time (HST)2:00 a.m.-6:00 p.m. For most US customers, there is ample time to contact DISH after work (assuming you work a nine-to-five job). That said, when you adjust for time differences, Alaskan residents have a tighter window. But Hawaiian residents really get the short end of the deal since DISH's customer service hours are almost entirely during average sleep and work hours. If your schedule is more flexible, DISH suggests calling between 2:30 p.m. (EST), which is likely when they experience lower call volume. For technical support matters, DISH representatives are available 24 hours a day at 1-855-402-3233. Do you suspect a service interruption in your area? Don't waste time with one of those outage-detection sites—that only confirms you have a problem (which you already knew). If you want action so you can finish your late-night screening of John Wick ASAP, remember that DISH technical support reps are available around the clock. Call 'em up. They're awake. For all other questions, dial 1-800-333-3474 to reach a representative. After you indicate your language preference, you'll be asked if you're a current or potential new DISH customer. If you're already with DISH, press 1. The automated menu will ask for your account number or phone number, then connect you to a rep. If you're a new customer seeking information to help you decide whether to sign up for DISH, press 2 and you'll be transferred to a rep. But who actually talks on the phone nowadays? If the idea of another person's voice is just so 2005, a DISH rep can answer your questions through a private, text-only chat. To open a chat window, visit the DISH customer support page and scroll all the way down to find the "Chat With Us" button. Once you click, a virtual agent will greet you. To get a live rep, respond "agent"—three tries should do the trick. You'll see a message that says "XX seconds to chat blastoff." Don't believe that. It's unreliable. But the waits, in our tests, were between one and five minutes. Once a DISH rep joined the chat, they were friendly and worked to understand and answer our questions. If you're the independent type, DISH has a user-friendly, searchable support page so you can help yourself. You can also contact DISH reps via Facebook and Twitter. If you're already a DISH customer, here are a few ways to get in touch: DISH Online Support Center: This contains articles and videos covering most any question about service, from remote programming to signal troubleshooting. My DISH: Here you can check on your account and payments or change packages. Use a forum: Consult fellow DISH customers in MyDISH Communities. You can also contact DISH on Facebook and Twitter. When your connection drops out during an episode of Ballers, DISH provides live, 24/7 tech support hours: 8:00 a.m. to midnight (EST). Since business owners have different support needs, there's a separate customer service line for DISH business customers: 1-888-661-8432. In-person payment methodFeeMoneygram Express Payments $6.75CheckFreePay$2.50EPay$3.00 Do you like to keep it local? And do business face-to-face and with cash? We feel you. DISH customers may pay their monthly bill in person anywhere that accepts Moneygram Express Payments, Western Union, CheckFreePay, and EPay. Find a location with DISH's Pay-in-Cash Locator. As shown above, these services charge a fee. A little preparation never hurts. Before you pick up the phone, be ready with the following information: Your exact address. Your neighbor probably doesn't want a dish on their roof. Your credit card or preferred method of payment. DISH will nudge you toward paperless billing, but it's not mandatory. Your phone number and email address. DISH sends out notices and special offers to these, which can be useful. A snack and a beverage. If you call during a high-demand time (lunch hour, right after work, etc.), you might have to wait a while to talk to a real person. There are a couple ways to submit your DISH Network payment extension option gives you up to nine more days to submit your payment without service interruption. But it will cost you an extra $15 and can be used only once per billing period. To check your eligibility, follow these simple steps: 1. Go to the My DISH login page and log in to your account. 2. In the Bill section of the Account Summary page, click on "Payment Extension." (If this option doesn't appear, your bill may be current or you may not qualify.) 3. Find the payment option you'd like and click Submit. As of February 13, 2020, you can use your PayPal account for AutoPay. Don't got PayPal? No problemo. Your debit card, credit card, or bank account will get the job done, too. Just head to My DISH to log in and sign up. Dial 1-800-333-3474. Press one of the following numbers. a.
